TAIYIBA, Israel - Six Israeli policemen and five Arabs were injured in a violent anti-Israeli protest Tuesday, and 38 demonstra-tors were arrested, officials said.

Deputy Police Inspector Yoram Niv said by telephooe that the in-juries occurred in a demonstration in Jahuliya, two miles (3.2 kilometers) cortheast of Tel Aviv. The protests marked the day in 1976 when six Palestinians protest-ing confiscation of Arab lands were killed by Israeli gunfire on what has become known as "Land Day." At one rally Tuesday, in Sakhnine in northern Galilee, the banned Palestinian flag was flown.

Space Shuttle Lands Smoothly On Desert Strip

From Agency Dispatcher WHITE SANDS, N.M. — The space shuttle Columbia returned from its third flight in space Tuesday, making a perfect landing at this desert ar strip.

The delta-winged aircraft glided onto a runway at the U.S. Army missile test range at 9:04 a.m., one day behind its original schedule. The one-day extension of the weeklong mission was made necessary by a sandstorm in the landing area Monday.

129 Orbits

As part of its test flight program, the Columbia was under control of its on-board computers until it came within 200 feet (60 meters) of the ground. Then Ma-rine Col. Iack R. Lousma, 46, took the controls for the landing, the Columbia's third in 11 months.

He and Air Force Col. Gordon Fullerton, 45, had spent more time flying the Columbia than the craft had spent in space during its first two test flights.

The Columbia, which blasted off from the Kennedy Space Center at Cape Canaveral, Fla., March 22, completed 129 orbits of the Earth before landing. At the end of the final orbit, Col. Lousma and Col. Fullertoo fired two rocket engines over west-ern Australia. The rockets slowed the shuttle from its orbital speed of 17,500 miles (28,000 kilometers) an

The shuttle then dropped back into the Earth's atmosphere at an altitude of about 250,000 feet and began heating up from friction.

The friction made the shuttle's beat-absorbing tiles glow red bot

But as the Columbia neared the coast of California at 16 times the speed of sound, Col. Lousma radioed to the Johnson Space Center in Houston: "This is really a beautiful Roise machine."

est rival, the ultra-rightist Republi-can Nationalist Alliance, known as ARENA and led by Robert D'Aubuisson, had 214,005 votes.

The National Conciliation Party, another rightist party, followed with 126,895 votes, and three other rightist parties had a combined 13 percent of the vote. Mutilated or blank ballots accounted for the rest of the tabulated votes.

The Christian Democrats were seeking a coalition with the most moderate of the rightist groups, the Democratic Action Party, which could give them a majority of the new assembly's seats. But the hopes of the Christian Democrats were set back when the Democratic Action Party leader, Rene Fortin Magana, signed a joint statement with the other four rightist groups calling for a "na-tional unity" to freeze out the Christian Democrats. Mr. D'Aubuisson, who is accused of having ties with rightist terrorists, said his party would "lead and control" any coalition

Iran Reported to Inflict Heavy Losses on Iraq

By George C. Wilson

Washington Post Service
WASHINGTON — Iranian troops have decimated three Iraqi divisions around the Dezful border area in an offensive that has put Baghdad's invading military forces on the verge of collapse, according to U.S. officials.

Intelligence reports reaching Washington said 20,000 Iraqui troops have been battered by Iranian attacks that occurred in three big waves, one March 22, the second March 24 and the biggest of all this past weekend.

The reports appeared to confirm Iran's claim Mooday that it had made major advances in the onagain, off-again war that broke out Sept. 22, 1980.

Order to Withdraw

[In Beirut the Iraqi news agency INA said Tuesday that Iraq's military command has ordered its 4th Army to withdraw from positions on the front, Reuters reported. The agency quoted Iraqi President Saddam Hussein as saying in a message to the commander: "The general command of the armed forces has decided to rearrange 4th Defense Army forces to the rear after your blows absorbed the advance of the enemy attack."]

Iraq's forces had quickly pushed 40 or more miles into Iran along a bundred mile front at the start of the war, capturing or damaging several provincial cities and major Iranian oil facilities. The war climaxed years of border disputes between the two countries and, at the dieted a quick Iraci victory.

The Iranian Army has shown considerable improvement in recent months, however, and, in an indication of its new confidence, Tehran on Sunday allowed a group of American reporters into the country for the first time since January, 1980, "to see the victories of the Islamic army."

U.S. officials said the toll of killed and wounded has been extremely heavy as Iranian artillery, fighter bombers, armor and waves of infantry concentrate their fire on a stretch of border country near Shush, 20 miles (32 kilometers) soothwest of Dezful, in Khuzestan province. Iran said Sunday that it had killed 8,000 Iraqis and wounded 12,000 in the past week.

While declaring that they still do oot have reliable figures on killed and wounded, these officials said there is hard evidence that about

However, U. S. analysts said the Iranians have not brought in the trucks, armor and supplies it would take to drive deeply in Iraq. EEC Leaders Seek Plan With U.S. on Economy

By Axel Krause

International Herald Tribune
BRUSSELS — Leaders of the 10 Common Market nations, ending a two-day summut meeting here Tuesday, urged adoption of a coordinated economic strategy to combat recession when heads of seven industrialized nations, including the United States, meet in France during early lune. Renewing appeals for a change in policy by the Reagan adminis-tration, leaders of the European Economic Community stated to their joint communique that they booked to the Versailles summit "to institute increased cooperation between the major industrial partners aimed particularly at encour-aging a reduction in interest rates, making exchange rates less volatile and strengthening North-South re-

French Objections

But the EEC summit meeting also was marked by wide divergences regarding economic strate-gy and by failure to resolve the question of Britain's contribution to the community budget. That is-sue appeared deadlocked Tuesday evening, primarily because France rejected a compromise proposal drafted by EEC Commission President Gaston Thorn and Belgian Foreign Minister Leo Tindemans.

French President François Mitterrand, meeting with newsmen aiter the summit ended, stated that it had made progress in "promotiog greater cohesion" in EEC economic policy. But he rejected the

It was not immediately clear what progress, if any, could be made when EEC foreign ministers take up the issue in Luxembourg Saturday. Both Mr. Thorn and Mr. Tindemaos said that they would continue pressing for a settlement. British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told newsmen that responsibility for the problem was Mr. Mitterrand's and that Britain remained ready to negotiate a set-tiement. EEC sources said that Britis might block a farm pricefixing round scheduled to get under way when community agricul-ture ministers meet in Brussels for several days starting Wednesday.

Mr. Mitterrand, responding to a question regarding preparations for the Versailles summit, which he will be hosting, said that he was hopeful of developing further bases of agreement with its participants in coming weeks, noting that he recently has met with leaders of the United States and West Germany and that in the next few weeks he planned talks with offi-cials of Canada and Japan.

But he did not specify what measures the EEC nations would propose for discussion at the summit. Sources emphasized that the Europeans will adopt a tough and coordinated line with regard to their warning to President Reagan about high U.S. interest rates and

Britain Proposes Moratorium on Atlantic Air Routes

LONDON - Britain said Tuesday it has proposed a two-year moratorium on new air routes over the North Atlantic where airlines are suffering big losses.

The Trade Department said it has told U.S. authorities at a meeting being held in London this week that it wants to halt an annual increase in routes agreed with the United States two years ago. The recession in the aviation industry is causing serious problems for both British and U.S. airlines operating the most competitive route in the world, a department spokesman said. In 1981, there were 2.5 million empty seats on aircraft between Britain and the United States. That's the equivalent of 17 empty jumbo jets flying across the North Atlantic every day," he said. The International Air Transport Association has said major carriers lost $1.4 hillion on the route last year. Two British and seven U.S.

He said, "We are confident that the constituent assembly, given the extraordinary mandate it has received from the Salvadoran people, will find ways to hold out a hand of conciliation to those adversaries who are prepared to take part peacefully in the democratic

The administration, which gambled heavily on the belief that the elections would demonstrate a lack of popular backing for the guerrillas, now hopes that a new effort can be made to convince the insurgents that their only hope for a share of power lies in winning support through the ballot box rather than on the battlefield.

Although the details are secret, the administration has been preparing "suggestions," involving guarantees of protection and other enticements, that it believes might provide the basis for negotiations between the Salvadoran government and the left.

'Campaign of Terror'

In addition, the administration is expected to put increased pressure on the guerrillas to negotiate by starting a new effort to cut them off from the support that Washington says they receive from Cuba and Nicaragua. The guerrillas still have the external support to continue their campaign of terror at levels that would be impossihle if they depended on their own people," Mr. Haig said.

Last Friday the State Depart-ment denied a Mexican announcement that plans have been made for U.S. and Nicaraguan officials to meet in Mexico City in early

In private, U.S. officials said the administration is unwilling to com-mit itself publicly to discussions with Nicaragua before the new Salvadoran government is in place and Washington has a clearer picture of how serious the Nicaraguans are about negotiations. But, the officials said, while the administration remains doubtful about the chances for successful talks, it is committed to giving them a try soon because of the need to show critics that President Reagan is willing to explore any avenues that might lead to peace.

In Congress, the first reactions to the voter turnout were positive.
House Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, an Illinois Republican, said, "No one can say what will happen next, but history will record that for one brief, shiring moment, amidst the darkness of airlines operate 19 routes into the war, the people at least voted in large numbers." Salvadoran Rightist Parties Seek Coalition Government

Some of the rightists favored alowing Christian Democrats into a coalition government. But Mr. Cerrato said a key point of any agreement would be Mr. Duarte's exclusion from power. ARENA's secretary, Mario Redaelli, said the coalition invitation was a move to depose Mr. Duarte, the leader of the U.S.-supported civilian-mili-tary junta, and include in the government Christian Democrats who rejected his leadership.

In a manifesto published in local newspapers, the five rightist parties specified that they will main-

Resounding Rejection

The manifesto also said the large turnout for Sunday's election demonstrated a rejection of Communism and "Communitarianism" a label the right has often placed on the land reforms sponsored by Mr. Duarte's centrist Christian Democrats. The reforms rely on redistributing land to cooperatives, rather than to private citizens.

Julio Adolfo Rey Prendes, for-mer mayor of San Salvador and the No. 2 man to Mr. Duarte in the centrist party, said any coalition government would have to be widely discussed.

Mr. Rey Prendes said the Christian Democrats do not want to share power with Mr. D'Anbuisson's party. The Christian Demo-crat added that peasants' unions and other workers' groups were "very worried" about how a rightist-led government would treat

Mr. Duarte, interviewed Monday night on a U.S. television news show, said a rightist government "could also change certain laws, especially on the reforms we make, they could go back on the reforms... This is a real threat. This is what I told the people, and this is the reason why the people went out and voted, they wanted to stop that, to stop it by voting."

The voting was for 60 members of a constituent assembly, which is to name an interim government, write a new constitution and prepere for presidential and congresional elections.

The EEC leaders moved closer together in their approach to eco-nomic policy, although they failed to recommend specific steps. Conference sources said this nevertheless represented progress when compared with the problems that marked the November summit in

In particular, the joint commusque stressed the need to expand and promote investments to combat worsening unemployment, while compromising differences between nations that favor government intervention, such as France, and those, like West Germany, that are more oriented toward the private sector.
"Stress should be laid more on private and public productive in-vestment. It is essential in this con-nection that both sides of industry contribute to the achievement of those objectives," it stated.

Fresh Momentum

In a related step, the EEC leaders urged action by their finance ministers to give the European Monetary System fresh momen-tum ... by strengthening economic convergence, the EMS mechanism, the role of the ECU [European Currency Unit] and monetary cooperation between the commumity and third countries."

In the field of foreign relations. the summit leaders avoided any endorsement of Mr. Tindemans' proposal for establishing EEC in-stitutions or committees for discassing economic and security is-sues with the United States. E. Germany, Leading Afghan Envoy Is in Exile, Declares Resistance to Karmal

By Michael T. Kaufman New York Times Service NEW DELHI - One of Afghanistan's most experienced diplomats, a man who was ambassador to Britain, India and the United Nations, openly declared himself in resistance Tuesday to the Soviet-backed government of the country he fled a week ago. Abdul Rahman Pazhwak, who was president of the UN General Assembly during the emergency session on the Israeli crisis of 1967, said that, though he was 63 and had a stomach ulcer, he was eager to travel anywhere to foster unity among the guerrilla groups of Af-ghanistan and to solicit foreign assistance to pressure the Soviet Un-ion to withdraw its occupying

Mr. Pazhwak had been recalled from his last post, as ambassador to Britain, at the time of the 1978 coup that brought the first of three Marxist governments to power in Afghanistan. He said he was kept under house arrest until Babrak Karmal took over the presidency in the wake of the Soviet military intervention of December, 1979.

"Since then I have been in retirement in Kabul," said the diplo-mat, who was once president of the UN Commission on Human Rights.

Mr. Pazhwak said he had been invited several times by Mr. Karmal to participate in the govern-ment, but refused.

"When the Russians occupied my country, I thought it was my duty to join my people in their struggle in any way that I possibly could. As soon as I was able to leave my sickbed I decided to find ways to join the freedom fighters,"

He said he obtained a visa to go to India for medical treatment but has go intention of returning to Afghanistan, where his wife and bree brothers remain.

resistance Mr. Pazhwak said it is now clear to everyone in Afghanistan that real sovereign power resides with Moscow and not with Mr. Karmal "In the beginning Karmal was told by the Soviets that he was a hero, bringing revolution, but now I am sure that in their bearts these socalled leaders see themselves as victims," he said. Soviet troops actually maintain control of the country only during the daytime, he said. He also said Afghanistan's party conference two weeks ago was derailed by resistance activity and by deep splits within the ruling party.

Mr. Pazhwak said 18 delegates to the conference were killed in attacks by Islamic guertillas.

Building of Bases He said there was no indication that the Russians were considering a withdrawal. In fact, he said, their uilding of bases and takeover of education and the legal system showed that they regarded the occupation as permanent. The diplomat said he would try to convince the major powers that, with Soviet troops perched on the borders of Pakistan and Iran, it vas in other countries' interest to aid Afghanistan in expelling the Russians or to pressure them to withdraw. But if we can't convince these powers, we will have to resist ourselves," he said. He said he has devised a plan calling for the convening of an international conference on Afghanistan that would include the perma-nent members of the UN Security Council — the United States, the Soviet Union, China, France and Britain — as well as Afghanistan's neighbor states and perhaps other interested countries, such as India. The conference would declare and warrant the independence of Afghanistan and would advance the formation of an Afghan government in independent Afghanistan based on the will and determination of the people as expressed through democratic elections supervised by the United Nations."

he said, He conceded that there was no sign that the Soviet Union would accept such a conference, but said he hoped that, if greater diplomatic pressures could be brought to bear on Moscow, the approach might gain acceptability. In order to encourage such pres-sures, Mr. Pazhwak said he plans to visit the resistance leaders and urge them to form a provisional coalition government, then appeal to "the free world to recognize this government, to establish our indopendence and at the least offer us moral support."

Reagan Approves Plan To Spend $4.2 Billion On Nuclear Survival

By Don Oberdorfer Washington Post Service

The program, made poblic Mon-day by the Federal Emergency Maoagement Ageoey, which would be responsible for carrying it out, represents a large-scale increase in government activity to prepare U.S. civilians to survive an atomic holocaust. Only $133 mil-

There was no explanation from the White House about why Mr. Reagan had decided on a large-scale upgrading of emergency preparations at this time. However, Mr. Reagan and other administration figures have expressed the view that the Soviet Union is better prepared for a nuclear war than the United States. Some have stated that even an all-out nuclear exchange could be "survivable" with advance preparations.

Mr. Holton said the plan's objective is to double the number of Americans who would survive a full-scale nuclear attack. Since present calculations are that about 40 percent would survive, he said, the objective is an 80-percent rate.

The other three objectives in Mr. Reagan's order are enhancement of strategie "deterrence and stabil-ity," including maintenance of "perceptions" that the international strategic balance is favorable to the United States; reduction of the possibility that the United States could be coerced in a crisis; and improvement of the government's ability to deal with natural disasters and other unspecified "large-scale domestic emergencies." The program also envisions con-struction of blast shelters for key industrial workers who would remain in high-risk areas during a nuclear crisis and unspecified protection of "key defense and population relocation support industries." On Increasing Taxes

A federal tax increase is now clearly necessary. But the Reagan administration has been arguing that taxes are already too high and that any further increase will damage the operation of the economy.

There's certainly a traditional level of federal taxation to which Congress has held over the years with remarkable precision. For most of the time since the Korean War, Congress has kept total federal revenues at just about 18 or 19 percent of the gross national product. They went higher with the Vietnam surtax in 1968, but that tax was hastily repealed only 18 months after it was imposed. Despite all that you have repeatedly heard about decades of steadily rising taxation, the ratio of revenues to GNP didn't move out of that traditional range until 1979. Last year it was 21 percent of GNP, and this year, even after the big tax cut last summer, it will still be well over 20 percent. Is it wise to impose an increase to push it even higher?

Can people adjust? What's happened over the past 20 years is that the federal government has gradually taken over a wide range of responsibilities that used to be private and personal. But revenues have note been raised to match. That is the reason big deficits have become chronic.

Twenty years ago, federal revenues were 18.4 percent of GNP. But if grandfather got sick, the family was expected to pay the hospital bills out of its pocket. Unemployment compensation was very thin soup, and Social Security was not a great deal better. Working people had to set aside much larger amounts of their personal funds against all those prospects and risks. These days, their taxes are higher, but some important claims on their after-tax income have been taken over by the government - in its legitimate role as the ultimate insurance plan.

Over the past 20 years it is not defense spending but the many kinds of social insurance that have made the budget grow faster than the economy. If Americans do not want to cut back on their social insurance - as they should not - then they are going to have to pay the premiums for it. That is not only necessary but tolerable. It is not only tolerable, but fair.

U.S. Bats and Bombers

A tale of bats in World War II keeps reverberating as we hear about modern strategic weapons. According to American Heritage magazine, military researchers once spent $2 million - a lot of money then - to tie incendiary bombs to bats so that they could set Japan afire. A dentist in Pennsylvania sold President Roosevelt on the idea in 1942. A top defense researcher thought the attack could demoralize the enemy. A Harvard chemist designed a bat-borne celluloid container for carrying napalm gel and a 15-hour timer to set it off.

The bats were to hibernate in cold storage until dropped in boxes that cushioned the fall; they were then to find refuge in assorted buildings, bite through the strings of their cargo, and leave the explosives behind. But bats and boxes did not work as expected; many broke their wings in tests, or never woke up. The project was abandoned in 1944, but not until after the bat bombers had destroyed several buildings at a California airport and a general's car.

Somehow that brings to mind the batty bomber of the present era, also known as B-1. A supersonic version was canceled by President Carter in 1977; at $100 million each, he judged it too expensive - and unlikely for very long to be able to penetrate Soviet defenses. He decided instead to build the 1,500-mile Cruise missile to be lobbed from afar by the existing B-52 bombers until a better plane came along.

It later leaked out that the Stealth bomber, almost invisible to radar, was being developed for better penetration. But President Reagan decided last year to go ahead with a modified subsonic B-1 anyway.

By then, the cost was estimated at $200 million to $400 million each, and it was not expected to fly until 1986. But last month, the Pentagon's present research chief let the bat out of the bag: the Stealth would be flying by 1991; the B-1 would be filling a "gap" of only five years. Without batting an eye, the Pentagon resolved that embarrassment by declaring the Stealth's estimated time of arrival to be a secret and deleting it from congressional records.

That is not the end of battiness. The administration also wants to produce the big MX missile before anyone has found a safe way to base it. The plan for moving 200 MXs among 4,600 garages, as in a giant shell game, is dead. But the Pentagon still wants to build 40 of them for Minuteman silos which it has already pronounced vulnerable to attack. At this rate, we expect to learn one day that the MX's are really hibernating in underground belfries for a most imaginative but secret mission.

Progress on Yellow Rain

The State Department has released a longpromised report summarizing the evidence it believes proves that the Soviet Union is waging chemical war in Southeast Asia and Afghanistan. Publication of the report is a welcome step toward a more effective government effort to raise international consciousness on this subject.

There is little new in the document, Most of the information contained in it has been released in different forms and forums over the past few years. But the digestion of voluminous refugee reports and organization of the military, intelligence and scientific data into a single, compact report, shorn of the misstatements that have marred earlier pronouncements, is a definite advance. The sum of the available evidence - though much of it remains flimsy on its own - makes a compelling case that chemical agents are in fact being used, though which agents and by whom remains less clear.

Although much more carefully written than previous statements, this one unwisely ignores the inconsistencies and unanswerable questions raised by the findings. The reader is led to believe that no troubling questions have been raised, that there have been no unexpected findings and that all expected evidence has been found. The report does not address, or even recognize, questions raised by scientists, refugee workers and others since the findings were first made public.

Among these unresolved puzzles is the question of whether trichothocene toxins do or do not cause massive hemorrhaging. The report itself is inconsistent on this question. Also in need of further explanation is how concentrations of the toxins in the range of what has been found could be lethal to man. They appear to be far too low to cause death.

The report would have been strengthened, not weakened, by a candid discussion of these and other problems. Collecting this sort of information in the field often produces confusing and even misleading data. Working under wartime conditions makes everything correspondingly harder. No one expects the evidence to be watertight. Ignoring the contradictions and gaps only serves to undermine the government's case when others point them out.

This report helps to buttress the government's prior claims. More needs to be done. Conclusive proof of Soviet culpability and clear identification of the chemical agents being used have not yet been produced - at least publicly. When both have been produced, the job of stopping this inexcusable warfare should then be shifted to the top of the international agenda.

Switzerland and the UN

In its White Paper proposing that Switzerland should become a member of the United Nations, the Swiss government states its view that to join would be desirable, opportune and essential. NEW YORK - The Heraid comments: "To such as give attention to the causes of sudden death it is quite evident that heart disease is fast becoming a leading factor. Every little while certain statistics in this city and elsewhere prove the point in a significant and direct way. Medical writers in this country and in Europe draw due attention to the melancholy condition of affairs and virtually agree that our modern methods of strenuous living, overindulgence in rich foods and mental strain are the principal accounting causes. The main trouble is that the extra busy man takes no time to think of himself. It is worry, rush and hurry — and the inevitable verdict of the coroner's jury."

NEW YORK - While the North Atlantic conference of shipping interests met in Brussels to consider sweeping reductions in steamship fares for all classes with a view to facilitating transatlantic passenger traffic this summer, the United States Lines, North German Lloyd and White Star lines moved to put into effect at once the lowest fare since before the war. United States Lines took the lead, slashing rates 20 percent. North German Lloyd fell in line with reductions ranging from 20 to 50 percent. As a result of these cuts giving impetus to tourist travel to Europe, an immediate increase in ocean traffic is expected. Meanwhile French, British and German shipping interests are considering cuts.

Can Reagan's Tax Cut Be Salvaged?

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan's answer to a question from worried Interior Secretary James G. Watt at the March 26 Cabinet meeting proved how different from this capital's bipartisan conventional is the president's view of the economic crisis.

The Cabinet met amid rumors that the White House finally was succumbing to the panic of Republican leaders on Capitol Hill to narrow future budget deficit projections by raising taxes. Watt, the Cabinet's most steadfast supply-sider, asked President Reagan whether all those rumors meant income tax cuts approved by Congress last year were to be trimmed. Reagan responded with some passion that he never — yes, never — would agree to that.

To the president, the third-year tax cut of 10 percent beginning July 1, 1983, is an unrouchable, indispensable to his political revolu-tion. But to Republican leaders in Congress and many officials in the administration delaying or eliminating the third year of the tax cut is the surest path for hipartisan compromise on the budget.

Indeed, Democrats are eager to ravage the third year, for time is running out. Writing in The New York Times that the total Reagan tax cut must be sliced from 25 percent to 15 percent, Professor William Nordhaus of Yale said straight out what everybody here knows but does not say: "Once the tax cuts are in place ... political forces will make them irreversible."

If the full 25 percent tax cut plus future indexing for inflation are not reversed now, the nature of government in this country could be permanently changed, as Reagan promised in the 1980 campaign.

Thus, the pivotal nature of the third-year tax cut is fully understood by Ronald Reagan — and by the Democratic leadership, which does not want that change. But it is not appreciated by consensus-minded Republican leaders in Congress seeking agreement with their Republican leaders in Congress seeking agreement with their Democratic counterparts.

Applauded by the Washington establishment, these Republicans assail Reagan for inflexibility. Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker contends the economy will go over the cliff unless there is bipartisan agreement. Never happy about Reagan's tax policy, Baker sees it as far less important than budgetary agreement.

Those views are shared by House Republican Leader Robert Michel, instigator of current White House conversations with House Democrats. Michel, fearful that hard times will defeat him in hither-to-safely-Republican Peopia. Ill. has not disquised his exaperation to-safely-Republican Peoria, III., has not disguised his exasperation with his president's steadfastness. As a consensus-minded Washington politician, he went to Democratic leaders and James Baker, White House chief of staff, to suggest they negotiate.

Jim Baker would have no difficulty paring down that third-year tax cut if necessary for a budget agreement. But colleagues describe him as increasingly despondent and discouraged that the president insists on sticking to principle. Realizing Baker does not have Reagan's power of attorney, the Democratic leaders say they will agree to nothing without Reagan's signature.

But Senate Republican leaders — not all the rank-and-file — are moving ahead, not waiting for the Jim Baker negotiations. Sen. Pete Domenici, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, is viewed by critical Treasury officials as determined to keep control of the budgetary process, whatever happens to the Reagan tax cut.

Accordingly, a "bipartisan" budget could come out of Domenici's committee under a Republican label, approved by all its Democratic members and a minority of Republicans. To achieve the $120-billion tax increase desired by Domenici (much less the $190-billion boost pushed by Republican Sen. Slade Gorton of Washington), the thirdyear tax reduction must be kissed goodbye.

'On your feet, man! I'm trying to set you free! Free!"

Rep. Jack Kemp, chairman of the House Republican Conference, seems nearly alone among Republican leaders in publicly declaring that a bipartisan agreement aborting the tax cut is worse for the economy than no agreement at all. But he has allies among junior Republican members.

Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, a fiery second-termer, has sent all Republican colleagues a letter urging support for a program which "does not tamper with the individual income tax rate cuts and indexing." Freshman Sen. Robert Kasten of Wisconsin has been fighting that lonely battle within the Senate Budget Committee. Sen. William Roth (of Kemp-Roth fame) has mobilized 18 Republican senators to filibuster any change in the third-year tax cut.

Their answer to legislative stalemate is resurrection of the 1981 conservative coalition of Republicans and boll-weevil Democrats that, like the president himself, would treat the third-year tax cut as untouchable. While viewed as unattainable by Bob Michel and Howard Baker, that is the only route to a budget agreement that does not roll back the dramatic relief from oppressive taxation and super-government that Reagan has made his historic mission. 01982, Field Newspaper Syndicate.

Baldrige and the Bid for Japanese Markets

By Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON — Malcolm Baldrige, the chain-smoking secretary of commerce, thinks the time has come to play hardball with Japan on trade issues. Drawing on his experi-ence as a businessman in Japan, Baldrige tells a listener in his office that having "targeted" steel and autombiles to "be their export strengths in the '60s and '70s," the Japanese have now decided to target telecommunica-tions, computers, and other high-technology items in the 1980s and 1990s.

Baldrige has been lecturing Japanese officials on the need to open up their markets further to Western exporters. "Sure," he says he has told them, "you gotta export more, but you can't continually export more without inporting more, because you're no longer the small island country coming back from the ravages of World War II."

drige knows. Japanese government and business officials can barely conceal their anger at what they regard as an American effort to shift the blame for poor economic management from Washington to Tokyo.

The most dramatic symbol of what Baldrige sees as a new Japanese assault on the American economy is a tiny silicon "chip" called a 64K RAM — the acronym for a random access memory that can store or change 64,000 bits of digital computer data. It is the main memory bank used in today's computers.

The 64K RAM, capable of holding four times the amount of data that could be squeezed into its predecessor, the 16K RAM, is a hot item. From $100 million in sales last year, the market has exploded to $600 million year - and the potential for next year is at least double that.

In a bitter competitive battle featured by plunging prices, Japan has grabbed 70 percent of the 64K RAM market from the Americans the grys who invented the semiconductors in the first place and who taught the Japanese how to make them

How did the U.S. industry lose out? Two cars ago, on a reporting assignment in Silicon Valley, Calif. (then beadquarters for most of the U.S. chip makers), I found the American companies stunned by the Japanese ability to go from zero to 40 percent of the 16K RAM market within a few years, largely because the Japanese were putting out what was without doubt a higher quality product;

So the U.S. companies redoubled their efforts to boost quality, and head the Japanese off from the market. But as Andrew Pollack recently reported in the New York Times, the U.S. manufacturers "managed to trip themselves up." The Japanese came to the market with 64K RAMs ready for sale, while many American companies, trying to make their chips smaller and more complex, could not get them off the drawing board.

Baldrige admits the American companies goofed. But he does not think the industry should quit trying - and indeed, American companies using chips are auxious to have American suppliers, provided they match the Japanese product in price and quality.

"We developed that industry, and Japan wouldn't have been anywhere near close enough to take advantage of one slip in misjudgment in the United States if, for example, they had not had direct personnent further. they had not had direct government funding for research and development," Baldrige asserts. "They're good. You can't take that away from them. But they wouldn't have been close enough to do that if they hadn't had these other factors going for them."

from "very good manufacturing techniques." Baldrige has an explanation for Japan's great exporting success that has built up a $20-billion trade surplus with the United States: The Japanese take technological breakthroughs from the United States and Europe and feed them to their own companies, which are assured no competition in the Japanese market while the process is perfected. Once the bugs are worked out, the Japanese turn private companies loose to "target" export markets.

Baldrige is pressing the case that Japan must open its market not just to agricultural products but to American high-tech equipment. He cites the refusal of a Japanese pharmaceutical company called Green Cross to use any of the sophisticated blood-fractionating techniques developed in the United States, although Japan has unrestricted access to the "raw material." in this case blood plasma imported from the United States.

"They've got this monopoly," Baldrige says, and with the money they get from the monopoly, they are now buying our genetic engi necring companies, a fast-growing high technology business in the United States. They keep telling us that, really, Americans just have to work harder, and learn to speak Japanese (to break into their markets). But I'll tell you, I could go to a Japanese Kraft paper-board buyer, and (without speaking Japanese) hold up a piece of U.S. board, and draw a figure on it - $390 a ton - and then take his paperboard, and draw the domestic price — $590 — and complete a sale right there.

"So from the high technology end to the low technology end, we can beat 'em for whatever reason — quality, price, or engineering ... But there's no way, if we can't get in, if we don't have access."

Daughter-in-Law Quits Gandhi's Home In Apparent Rift Over Her Political Role

NEW DELHI — Maneka Gandhi said Tuesday that she was thrown out of the house of her mother-in-law, Prime Minis-ter Indira Gandhi, but that she hopes to be asked to return. Maneka Gandhi, 26, the widow of Mrs. Gandhi's son, Sanjay, left the prime minister's residence Monday night after Mrs. Gandhi reportedly sent ber a let-ter accusing her of disloyalty.

The eviction came a day after Maneka Gandhi spoke at a political rally sponsored by a close associate of her husband and denounced by the prime minister as an "anti-party activity." She said it was trying to discredit her

"It is up to ber now," Maneka Gandhi said. "I have not done anything to merit being thrown out. I don't understand why I am being attacked and held per-sonally responsible. I am more loyal to my mother-in-law than even to my mother."

In what appeared to be a conciliatory statement, the young Mrs. Gandhi said she had nn plans of entering politics. "I am not a political person," she said.

Nonetheless, the family drama arose within a political context. Maneka Gandhi's appearance at the rally in Lucknow was widely seen as identifying herself with associates of her husband, who was killed in a plane crash in 1980. Their prospects and influence have declined sharply since the entrance into polities of Ra-jiv Gandhi, Sanjay's older

Whatever the actual state of relations within the prime minister's residence may have been, Indian journals have reported a growing rift between Sanjay's brother and Maneka Gandhi. Rajiv Gandhi, a former airline pilot, has been described as systematically demoting and humiliating some of the zealous white-shirted followers of his brother. These same people have openly looked to Maneka Gandhi to protect them and lead them in reforming their ranks.

Sources close to the prime minister said she had written to Maneka Gandhi pointing out that because of ber love for Sanjay, Maneka was taken into the family even though she came from a different background.

Mrs. Gandhi, the daughter of Jawaharlal Nehru, the first prime minister of India, is a Kashmiri Brahmin. Maneka Gandhi, once a model while in university, comes from a Sikh family. Her father died of gunshot wounds, reportedly self-inflicted.

The Indian news agency described the sources' explanation of Mrs. Gandhi's letter in this way: "Mrs. Gandhi said her heart was full of sadness. Because of her deep love for Sanjay, Maneka was taken into the family and given time to adjust. Thais Prepare Gilded Boats for Bicentennial

By William Branigin

Washington Post Service
BANGKOK — Struggling to overcome problems of organiza-tion and promotion, Thailand is preparing to bold a bicentennial celebration next week with a burst of pageantry featuring a river procession of ancient, gilded royal barges. Called the Rattanakosin Bicentennial, the occasion commemorates the founding 200 years ago of the Chakri Dynasty and the designation of Bangkok as the national

The celebrations officially started Jan. 1 and are to continue nationwide for the rest of the year, but the main events are scheduled between Sunday and April 21 in

Primarily, it will be a time of paying homage to Thailand's pop-ular king, Bbumibol Adulyadej. But the government also sees the bicentennial as an opportunity to promote Thailand's culture and heritage, strengthen national unity and counter the spread of Western several months. The highlight of the festivities is to be a river parade of 50 intricately carved and gilded royal barges propelled by 2,000 carsmen in traditional red and gold costumes.

Two of the teak barges are to carry the king and the crown prince down the Chao Phraya River in a procession to the memorial of King Rama I, who founded the Chakri Dynasty and declared Bangkok its capital in 1782. The last such royal barge parade took place during Buddhist religious ceremonies 16 years ago.

Anthorities have been quick to defend the bicentennial - expected to cost about $45 million against suggestions of extrava-gance and madequate promotion to bring in foreign tourist revenue. Lt. Gen. Chan Ansuchote, who

Peking Protests U.S. Distinction Between Taiwan, China Immigrants

PEKING - China, in a new sign of worsening relations with the Umted States, said Tuesday that it had formally protested U.S. immigration policy toward Taiwan.

The official media said the Chinese Foreign Ministry had delivered a diplomatic note to the U.S. Embassy in Peking on Friday that protested the new U.S. policy of treating Taiwan as a separate country in its immigration laws. U.S. Anti-Tank Plane Ready in South Korea

By Michael Getler

Washington Past Service SUWON, South Korea - The first detachment of U.S. Air Force A-10 tank-killing jet planes to be based in Asia is now operational at a South Korean airbase.

Eight of the twin-engine jets, billed as probably the most lethal anti-tank weapon in any arsenal in the world, landed earlier this month at this base about 50 miles (80 kilometers) south of the demilitarized zone that separates South Korea from the Communist northern half of the country.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, midway through a four-day visit to South Korea, got a glimpse of the new jets Tuesday during a visit to the hase to dedi-

Pravda Criticizes Sweden Arms Plan

MOSCOW — The Soviet Com-munist Party daily, Pravda, Tues-day criticized Sweden's current defense spending plans and said that they would make the neutral state increasingly dependent on the NATO alliance.

Sweden's 1982-1987 military program, now before parliament, includes large sums for new equipment "even though, as is known, Sweden is not threatened by anyone from anywhere," the newspa-It said the Swedish military was

More of a Difference

There are 444 A-10s scattered among other Air Force units in the United States and Europe. But pi-lois and planners believe that the ones stationed in South Korea, so close to the border with North Korea, may make more of a difference in battle than in any other re-

The A-10 is designed specifically as a tank-killer and the principal strength of the North Korean Army lies in its force of some 2,600 tanks, most of them older Soviet-built T-54 models but with some newer T-62s that are now also being produced in North Ko-

The A-10, which is built by Fairchild Industries in Maryland and New York, relies on its ability to fly lnw and slow and maneuver close to the ground. Its main anti-tank punch is a 30mm rapid-fire cannon that sprays 4,000 rounds of armor-piercing ammunition a min-

Air Force Lt. Col. Eben Jones, who flies an A-10 in South Korea, said the plane's maneuverability, the use of the hilly terrain for pro-tection, plus the short flight to the battlefield makes the plane ideal for the defense of South Korea.

Chinese protests were delivered in November to the House Foreign Affairs Committee and to the government, stressing China's opposition to the measure.

'Divided From China'

The disclosure of China's formal protest note extended the worsenng Chinese-American confrontafield. "On the Taiwan immigration problem, Taiwan is divided from China [under the new law]," Chinese television said. "It is treated as a single foreign country."

China earlier this month issued a protest against Taiwan being allowed to maintain liaison offices in the United States and other contacts considered "unofficial" by the U.S. government. Also provoking China's ire has been the participation of U.S. officials of the International Sofibali Federation in allowing Taiwan to fly its flag and play its anthem at the Wurld Winnen's Softhall Championships this summer in Having failed in secret discussions to persuade the United States to agree on a cutoff date for ending the sale of weapons to Taiwan, the Chinese are now preparing public opinion for the inevitable, these diplomats believe.

Others are still holding out hope that the Americans and Chinese

MUNICH - Carl Orff, 86, one claimed work and a milestone in of the most popular 20th-century composers of serious music, died Monday while under treatment for

His music reflected his love of literature and his belief that there was a unity in verse, image, dance and music. His work was characterized by dissonant counterpoint that nevertheless was popular with the public because of its vigorous, exciting rhythms.

Born on July 10, 1895, in Munich, the son of an army officer, he began to learn the piano, organ and cello at age 5. While still in his teens he wrote 50 songs based on works by Heine and other German poets. In 1914 he graduated from the Munich Academy of Music.
Mr. Orff founded a school in Munich in 1924 with Dorothee

Günther. With instruction in gymnastics, music and dance, it aimed for a new relationship between movement and music. His Schulwerk," pieces for children published in various revised editions between 1930 and 1935, revolutionized musical education with their simplicity and emphasis on rhythm. He began conducting in the Bavarian capital with a small cham-ber orchestra, the Munich Kammerspiele. After leading orchestras in Mannheim and Darmstadt, and directing the Munich Back Society from 1930 to 1933, he rose to national prominence with "Carmina modern music. It was first performed in 1937 in Frankfurt.

A scenic cantata for choir and solo singers, written mostly in me-dieval Latin, "Carmina Burana" is based on 13th-century texts and is characterized by an insistent, percussive drive. After its pren Mr. Orlf disowned his earlier works, saying "Carmina Burana" was to be regarded as his Opus I. He was awarded the New York music critics' prize for "Carmina Burana" in 1954.

Mr. Orff was one of the few prominent German composers to remain in the country under Hitler. The Nazis appreciated his forceful rhythms. In 1943 Orff completed another cantata, "Catulli Carmina," based on poems by Catullus. This was followed by the operas "Die Kluge" (The Clever Girl), complet-ed in 1943 and translated into nine languages, and "Die Bernauerin" (The Lady from Bernau), first per-formed in 1947. The title role of the latter was frequently played by Mr. Orff's daughter Godela, an actress. Another opera was "Der Mond" (The Moon).

Mr. Orff always insisted that his treatments of classical tragedies were not operas but "musicalizations."

Olympics Work In 1972 he wrote "Rota" for the opening ceremony of the Munich Olympics. Mr. Orff's last stage work, the apocalyptie "De Tem-porum Fine Comoedia," received early 1950s, he also gave his name to the Hallstein Doctrine by which West Germany severed diplomatic relations with any country that recognized Communist East Germany.

Under the doctrine, Bonn broke off ties with Yugoslavia in 1957 and Cuba in 1963. The policy was abandoned in the late 1960s as West Germany normalized its relations with Eastern Europe. Mr. Hallstein, a Christian Democrat, was Bonn's chief delegate to the conferences which led to the EEC's creation Flected manimously to preside over the Com-mon Market Commission, he served for its first 10 years, standing down in 1967.

In Brussels, flags flew at half-mast Tuesday outside the EECs headquarters where government leaders of the EECs 10 member states are meeting.

A pipe-smoking, bespectacled lawyer with a passion for work, Mr. Hallstein symbolized the policies of West Germany's first changration with the West and insulation from the East.

Born in Mainz, he studied law in Bonn, Munich and Berlin, becoming professor of private and company law at the University of Rostock in 1930. During World War II, he was first professor and then director of the Institute of Comparative Law in Frankfurt.

He was arrested by occupying U.S. authorities and spent two years in a prison camp, where he built friendly ties with the Americans and set up a university. Mr. Hallstein's political career began as West Germany's repre-sentative to Unesco. He first achieved prominence in 1950, heading the West German side at talks which led to the creation of the six-nation European Coal and Steel Community, the forerunner of the EEC. The EEC was founded under the 1957 Treaty of Rome by the same six countries: West Germany, France, Belgium, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and Italy.

As president of the EEC Commission, Mr. Hallstein often clashed with De Gaulle about the aims of European unity. He introduced a plan in 1959 urging a rap-id extension of the EEC and strongly supported Britain's entry into the community, which De Gaulle twice vetoed in the 1960s.

Kreisky Criticizes IHT Supplement For Political Bias

The Associated Press VIENNA — Chancellor Bruno Kreisky criticized on Tuesday a supplement about Austria printed Thursday in the International Herald Tribune. Mr. Kreisky termed the report "politically motivated.". He was angered by an article claiming that the ruling Socialist Party's government policies have shifted to the left since Herbert Salcher took over as finance minister last year.

The article was written by Ronald Barazon, editor of the Salzburger Nachrichten, which is considered one of the best newspa-pers in Austria but is believed by some to be unfriendly to Socialist policies.

Other articles in the supplement said bankers were worned about the Austrian economy, which has registered a large increase in unemployment in recent months.

EPA's Plan To Ease Lead Rule Dropped

Research on Dangers From Gasoline Cited

By Philip Shabecoff New York Times Service WASHINGTON - The Environmental Protection Agency, in the face of strong new evidence linking lead levels in human blood with those in gasoline, has decided to drop plans to repeal regulations limiting the amount of lead in gas-oline, EPA officials have disclosed.

The agency is also planning to close loopholes in existing regulations that permit blenders, as op-posed to refiners, to add lead to gasoline, and that permit imports of leaded gasoline.

However, the agency will leave standing an exemption for small refiners. Refiners producing 50,000 or fewer barrels a day are allowed to put up to 2.65 grams of lead per gallon in their gasoline. Officially, an agency proposal made last month to relax or repeal rules limiting the amount of lead that large refiners put in gasoline still stands. Hearings on the pro-posal are scheduled for April 14 The rules on banning lead were on the agenda prepared by Vice President Bush's regulatory reform group for re-examination and pos-sible repeal. The EPA, according to officials in it, has been heavily pressured by the petroleum indus try to change the rules. However, Anne M. Gorsuch, the administrator of the EPA, has decided not to the rules for large refiners, officials in the agency said

Birth Defects

When asked about the reports, Byron Nelson, spokesman for Mrs. Gorsuch, said the "EPA will await analysis of the information gathered at the hearings before making a final decision.

Lead, long known as a poison when ingested, also has been shown to cause birth defects as well as mental disabilities in children. Studies have shown that lead is absorbed into the body through breathing as well as by eating. Lead in gasoline improves en-gine performance. But because of its toxic qualities, lead had been limited by the EPA to no more than half a gram per gallon of gasoline produced by major refiners.

On Feb. 18, the agency said it was considering relaxing or repeating the lead standard on the ground that the spreading use of unleaded gasoline would enable safe levels to be reached without controls. However, earlier this month, the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta reported research showing a 36.7-percent decline in the amount of blood-lead levels in Americans between 1976 and 1980 directly attributable to the reduction of lead in gasoline.

The report also said, however, that the problem of lead poisoning in children remained and that conio reduce lead in would increase the margin of safety for children.

The officials said the rules might be modified to ease some of the regulatory burden on refiners through such methods as permitting intercompany averaging of lead levels. That would enable some refiners to exceed the limits on some occasions if the levels were being met by the companies generally.

How the Mung Bean Sprouted Into Popularity

THE WORLD'S most important bean is the soybean, genus Glycine. Asia; second comes the haricot bean, genus Phaseolus, America; third is the broad bean, genus Vicia. Europe, and fourth we have the mung bean, genus - what? From where?

Linnaeus said it was Phaseolus, and many botanisis today still call it Phaseolus mungo. They are almost certainly wrong. If it were Phaseolus it would presumably have to be native to the New Wnrld; and, again presumably, it is not. Some botanists have shifted to Vigna mungo; this may not be unassailable either, but

As to where it comes from, most persons assume it is Chinese, doubtful also. That is probably because its primary function, in Western eyes at least, is to produce the bean sprouts so common in Chinese cooking: besides, "mung" sounds Chinese. It may sound so, but is isn't. It is Sanskrit, the language of the country of which the mung bean is probably a native —

If the West looks upon the mung bean as useful mainly for producing sprouts, it is per-haps because they are so small that in countries well provided with alternatives it hardly seems worthwhile to take the trouble of eating them in unsprouted form (though when young and tender they are sometimes consumed pods and all, which brings them a little closer to manageall, which brings them a fittle closer to manage-sible size). The slender pods are three to finu-inches long, the 10 to 14 beans they contain, one-eighth of an inch in diameter — about half the size of an ordinary pea. This seems to be below the threshold of Western interest, but they are eaten like any other pulse in the Far East (including India) and Africa. They are also sometimes plowed under for green

Even in Asia, however, the mung bean is especially prized for its sprouts. These can also be provided by soybeans, but the mung bean is generally preferred. Mung bean sprouts are annually 75,000 bundredweight of beans. Bean sprouts for American consumption have to be grown in the United States if they are to be savored at their best, meaning fresh; canned bean sprouts give nnly a faint echo of the real thing. Even Texas, despite the airplane, is too far from most of the United States. Local production is the rule for large cities with a dependable demand in considerable volume, to make the enterprise commercially worthwhile. Even so, bean sprout production tends to create monopolies, for the product is so perishable and the process of growing them in quantity and then getting them to the customers is so expensive that few markets can support more than a single supplier. Thus in Paris, a single large company supplies almost all of them. The same is true of New York, where the leading producer of mung bean sprouts in Chinatown is so close to a monopoly that the others can be ignored. This company sells 4,000 pounds of sprouts daily to the city's Chinese restaurants and Oriental food shops.

The perishability of fresh bean sprouts makes their production a day-to-day operation. When the famous electricity blackout struck the northeastern United States, and especially New York City, its mung bean sprouts company lost two tons of sprouts. The loss, however, was not complete; the spoiled sprouts were car-ned to Delaware Valley pig farms by the trucks which hog farmers send regularly to China-town to pick up food debris considered medi-ble by bumans, but not by hogs.

The operation of the New York company (almost identical with that of its Paris counterpart) is an elaborate one. The sprouts are grown in cellars, for they should not be exposed to daylight. This keeps them white and crisp. They live in the atmosphere of an artifi-cial monsoon; an automatic sprinkle system treats them to a tropical typhoon every four or five hours. They reach a length of two inches in four days, and are harvested not later than a day or two after this. The temperature in the cellars is kept at about 75 degrees Fahrenheit, and they are perpetually bailed in warm fog. "With the possible exception of the crocodile pool in the Bronx Zoo," wrote The New Yorkr, "no other spot in town more closely resembles a Brazilian rain forest." What do Orientals do when they live outside of large marketing areas able to support these elaborate operations? They raise their own. The factors which make commercial bean sprout production so expensive and complicared are not inherent in the bean, but in the problems of mass marketing.

Under modern urban conditions, fresh bean sprouts cannot be provided without establishing an efficient delivery system, and this cannot be done at a price the sprouts will bring unless the producer operates on a very large scale, which means a considerable investment. When a private family produces its own sprouts, there are no such problems: production begins where the product ends.

Bean sprouts are easy to grow. You can produce them yourself if you want, in a kitchen cupboard, provided it is kept dark, damp and warm; but it is hardly worth the trouble if you are within reach of an Oriental food store, where you can buy them fresh, or, if worse comes to worst, canned.

Valentino Collection Draws Ovation

By Hebe Dorsey

DARIS - For the first time, Paris took an Italian designer to its heart, with the kind of standing ovation usually reserved for members of its own exclusive club. Valentino, the Roman-based Latin lover of fashion, made it with a collection that brought infectious joie de vivre to the cloudy Paris skies.

ft was long overdue, but Paris is tough on foreign competition and Italian designers are frankly hated. Roberto Capucci, whose talent was one of the brightest ever, came to Paris years ago, only to go back to Rome a broken man. Same thing with Simonetta, who ended up in an Indian ashram. But Valentino, whose smooth charm hides a lot of guts, broke that barrier because, quite simply, there was no resisting the excellence of his col-lection Monday. He and his partner, Gianfranco Giammetti, the business genius behind the scenes, never gave up despite some pretty rough backstage

"I love everything and I'm huying everything," bubbled Ge-neva-based Anita Smaga, who runs one of the sharpest retail operations in Europe. "The sun is shining in Paris today," echoed Neiman-Marcus president Philip Miller, although it was pouring outside

The turnabout came because Valentino stuck to his guns and put across a luxurious and light-hearted image. His cinthes are exquisite and exquisitely made. What's more, he knows how to make a woman look beautiful and feel beautiful -- a feat, if you think of all those fashion weir-

Valentino showed his clothes by groups of three in tableaux that were a series of hits - from the short bubbly knit coats to the big and equally bubbly taffeta gowns. Skirts were very short, except for a small selection inspired by South American folklore - a rampant trend.

This season, the emphasis is very much below the belt, and Valentino came up with a short detachable skirt that buttons in front and fits neatly over pants and under a waist-length jacket. That little skirt, or oversized peplum, is nften contrasting, such as brown suede over gray flannel pants.

As usual, this collection was full of luxurious, very Valentino touches. Sleek snakeskin, dyed in unusual colors such as hot pink, pale rose or camel, was used for kirts, collars and cuffs. Big blousons, a follow-up on his conture collection, were cut across by snakeskin bands and worn with matching asymmetrical snake-skin skirts. Shoes were the prettiest in Paris, especially the glamo-rous black sain pumps covered with rhinestones.

Fascinated by Hollywood glamor, Valentinn put rhinestone collars and cuffs over long sensuous black dresses. In a season full of sequins, he came up with three lovely little sequin tops, decorated with contrasting sequin flowers. Velvet was used in layers, red over black, in short dresses up over the knees or draped to the side. Color, lots of it, also helped make this collection the most pleasant in Paris. The evening was also festive for Valentino and his crew, who celebrated at Countess Georgina Brandolini's with steel magnate Heinrich von Thyssen and Baron and Baronne Guy de Rothschild — a sign that socially, at least, Valentino never had any trouble.

At Dior's, it was Princess Caroline of Monaco who got all the flash bulbs, which was not too surprising in a house that never seems to get its ready-to-wear line quite right. Despite repeated efforts with the blouson and the dinner jacket, it is hard to imagine a more lackluster group of clothes, as if Dior's designer, Marc Bohan, could not make the jump from couture to the more commercially restricting world of ready-to-wear

The Laroche collection, done by Guy Douvier (Gny Laroche does only the couture). was just the opposite - a quiet, low-key, low-priced but immensely successful operation, whose greatest story is at the cash register. The irony of it is that Douvier used to design the Dior-New York line years ago with great talent. Now, for Laroche, he makes the kind of clothes that are sought after by a vast majority of women who want to be in fashion without having to make a statement all the time.

Laroche's clients include some of the wealthiest women in the world who do not put fashion at the top of their priorities. They have more interesting things to do and nothing to prove. As one of them said lately: "Frankly, Laroche is plenty good. 1 wouldn't dream of spending a fortune on clothes. I'd much rather take a trip or help a friend." Se 1.7 100

The house of Chanel did not renew its contract with Philippe Guibourge (for whom this was his last Dior collection) and said it would make an announcement in a month. Nn name was given for a replacement. However, for the first time, the house paraded a series of so-called accessories, designed by a former American magazine editor, Frances Stein among them Chanel-ized cashmere separates and a lighter, easier approach, recalling what Adolfo, whose suits are Nancy Reagan's favorite, has done with the look.

There have been rumors that Karl Lagerfeld would come in as a consultant, a sticky point, since Lagerfeld's perfumes, produced by an American company, are in direct competition with Chanel's. Not to mention that Lagerfeld's style is miles from Chanel's. The last word belongs to Pierre Car-din, who detested the late Coco (he always showed his collection at the same time as hers, just to annoy) and who came up with the quote of the week; "If Karl goes to Chanel," he told Women's Wear Daily, "he'll be known

'Aida' Seals Renaissance of the Deutsche Oper

By James Helme Surcliffe International Herald Tribune

BERLIN - When what is now West Berlin's Deutsche Oper opened in 1912 it was as an opera house in the fashionable residential section of Charlottenburg, more or less in competition with the older theaters near Unter den Linden, competition which became formidable when the team of Carl Ebert, Rudolf Bing and Bruno Walter took over before being forced out by the Nazis.

Destroyed during the war, the 1961 reopening in a the sleek new building, with its hoge complex of workshops and offices, was over-shadowed by the debut of a less noble Berlin landmark, the infamous Wall, which from then on prevented the two-way cultural exchange that had been the city's life blood. Robbed of that competition, the Deutsche Oper had to develop a self-sufficient artistic viewpoint of its own, one that could maintain international standards without falling victim to jet-age routine in the hothouse atmosphere of the city's forced isolation

Classicism Under Sellner

Gustav Rudolf Sellner became Intendant (the German title for the person in overall theatrical control) at this crucial point. He was also a nated stage director. A specialist in the stark monumentalism and clean lines of classic Greek drama, he ushered in an era of new classicism in opera production with his pathbreakand the state of t its own, culminating in Fritz Wntruba's massive sculptural settings for Wagner's "Ring."

With Sellner's departure in 1972, however, nine lean years put the international reputation of the theater in jeopardy. Sellner's assistant, Egon Seefehlner, who moved to the Vienna State Opera in 1976, managed to maintain standards, but with the political appointment of Siegfried Palm for the following five years standards reached a low point. Mismanagement resulted in canceled performances, such as the disappearance without explanation of plans to bring Reimann's sensationally successful "Lear" from Munich to Berlin.

Except for noteworthy productions of Ver-di's "Macbeth" and Wagner's "Tristan," the repertory ran its dreary course, occasionally brightened by a scandal of the kind surrounding the cancellation of the planned all-star "Fidelio" last season, which should have been directed by Jean-Pierre Ponnelle and conducted by Daniel Barenboim, the result of an evident inability to distribute what had become — in West Berlin's peculiar showcase status — the highest budget of any German theater.

Palm was succeeded September by an experienced man of the theater, Götz Friedrich, whose apprenticeship under Walter Felsenstein at East Berlin's Komische Oper stood him in good stead when be stayed in the West after staging a controversial "Tannhäuser" at Bay-

Friedrich's auspicious beginnings disposed of legends that the Deutsche Oper's budget is eaten up by undismissable old singers that prevent the engagement of vocal stars. The season opened with performances featuring 12 of the finest singers on the international circuit, then proceeded to use all the old-timers in a stunning display of ensemble precisina, Janacek's "From the House of the Dead."

His production of Berg's "Lulu" in the three-act version in February, with the extraordinary Karan Armstrong in the title role, set the seal on his style: meticulously worked-out dramatic conceptions which make the viewer forget that singers are supposed to be bad actors. Vocal opulence was assured by the presence of Brigitte Fassbaender singing Countess Geschwitz for the first time, by Günter Reich as Dr. Schön, and by the handsome, lanky Pole Ryszard Karczykowski as Alwa, all supported with sensitivity from the pit by the opera's new music director, Jesus Lopez Cobos.

The most recent affirmation of West Berlin's renewed importance as a center of opera came last week with an unconventionally cast, totally different staging of Verdi's "Aida." Ponnelle's illness forced Friedrich to become the stage director on short notice, and he adapted ideas he had touched on in his East Berlin version of 1969 to the situation of having a singer-personality like Luciano Pavarotti singing Radames for nnly the second time. The Romanian Pet Halman has been designing fantastic (in the real sense of the word) costumes for Ponnelle since 1976, and his creations for "Aida" were nn less imaginative. Studiously avoiding picture-book Egyptianisms, he suggested the peri-od without imitating it — creams, fawns, choc-olate tones and crimsons for the kingdom of the Nile contrasting with blue-grays and mar-velous ethnic hairdos for the Ethiopians.

But be was also called upon to replace Pon-nelle as set designer and showed us an Egypt in decline, with an ominous black temple wall oc-cupying the entire background in which niches, windows and doors opened to reveal the dominating caste of priests surveying the ruined glo-ries of the pharach's grandeur below. The tri-umphal march thus became a ritual glorification of dead heroes before their corpses were enshrined in the temple, a reminder of victory's price in any war. Only the final scene - Radames and Aida shut out of the city rather than buried alive — was unsatisfying. Survival in the desert was possible, even in 700 B.C.

Soft-Edged Orchestral Approach

Barenboim's soft-edged orchestral approach with (in some cases) extraordinarily slow tem-pos that allowed for much exquisite inner instrumental detail, complemented the pomp-less stage picture. With the exception of the vividly projected, vibrant mezzo tones of the passionate Amneris, Stefanja Toczyscka - he was working with singers whose voices might be considered unorthodox for their roles. Julia Varady, privately Mrs. Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau, has been edging toward verismo roles via Mozart's dramatic heroines, and gave Aida a subtly shaded, beautifully phrased interpretation that bad enough power when needed. She scored a triumph. Her busband, the finest lieder singer of our times, has always been a distinguished singing actor, and his account of Amonasro was the dramatic focal point of the pro-duction, as convincing as the resonant Ramphis of Matti Salminen.

It was Pavarotti's name, however, that had sold out every performance well in advance and made Berlin's new "Aida" a magnet for enthusiasts from all over the continent. He did not disappoint, singing with the inimitable bright tenor "ping" that has characterized his bel canto work up until now, but with an unforced brilliance that calmed all fears that Radames was too dramatic a part for him. He was the nuly Italian among the roster of Polish, Hungarian, Finnish and German soloists, but that too is a signal for the internationalism that Friedrich is bringing back to West Berlin.

MEXICO CITY — Pemex, the Mexican state oil enterprise, has agreed with its clients that it will maintain its crude oil prices through April, a Pemex communiqué said Tuesday.

The elients had asked Pernex to lower prices, but it decided to keep its lighter Isthmus crude at $32.50 a barrel and its heavier Maya type at $25

Pemex will next month discuss with its elicots whether to change its sales makeup of 50 percent Maya and 50 percent Isthmus. Last month, Pemex said Mexico would continue selling its crude thus combined, denying rumors about a possible alteration in the mix.

British Aerospace to Get Aid for New Airbus

From Agency Dispatch LONDON — The British government has told British Aerospace thet financial aid will be available for it to join the Airbus A-320 project. Though the scale of the company's participation has still to be decided, chairman Sir Austin Pearce said Tuesday.

British Aerospace has asked the government to back either a 20-percent or a 30-percent share of the A.320 development program. This would cost the the company £400 million or £600 million through the mid-1980s, during the development period.

Sir Austin said British Aerospace had a 34 percent profit gain for last year but that sales of a new jetliner had been disappointing.

Marshall Field Seeks Better Deal From Batus

New York Times Service NEW YORK - The directors of Marshall Field & Co. have approved a proposal that Batus Inc. further sweeten its terms for acquiring Field by offering $30 in cash for all of the big retailer's outstanding common stock, financial sources said Monday. The move was seen as an effort to keep Field's shareholders from withdrawing stock already tendered or from waiting to tender shares in the belief that a better offer might appear. Two weeks ago, Batus raised its tender offer price to $30 a share from $25.50 a share for at least 65 percent of Field's stock.

The financial sources said that Field's move was also intended to keep the leahn group of investors, which has tendered its holding of 31 per-cent of Field common stock to Batus, from withdrawing its block before the April 6 withdrawal deadline.

Cowles Board Approves Dissolution Plan

New York Times Service

NEW YORK - Cowles Communications said that it had revived its plan of four years ago to distribute its assets to stockholders and then to dissolve the company.

At one time, Cowles ranked as a major publishing presence, based on Look magazine. But in recent years it has been classified as an invest-ment company. It owns about 2.6 million shares, or 22.1 percent, of the common stock of The New York Times Co., as well as two television

For some time, Cowles has indicated that it wanted to dispose of its Times stock and continue only as a broadcasting company. But had it sold the stock, Cowles would have had to pay tax on its profit on the sale, and Cowles shareholders would have to pay again once they received their proceeds from the sale. Under the proposed liquidation plan, no tax would be paid, a Cowles statement said.

Stroh Wins Early Court Test in Schlitz Bid

From Agency Dispatches DETROIT - Stroh Brewery said Tuesday that federal courts in North and South Carolina had temporarily barred Jos. Schlitz Brewing from seeking to enforce state takeover statutes against an offer by Stroh for 67 percent of the company at $16 a share.

Stroh, which Monday offered to buy two-thirds of the Schlitz for nearly $325 million in cash, argues that the state laws do not take precedcoce over federal antitrust statutes.

Documents filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission Monday disclosed that the surprise Stroh bid followed abortive negotiations between the two companies, which continued as late as Friday, either for Stroh to buy Schlitz or for Schlitz to buy Stroh.

'82 Dividend Commerzbank Omits Payout for 2d Year

From Agency Dispatches
FRANKFURT — Commerzbank, which has omitted its dividcod for the last two years, is confident it will be able to resume dividend payments next year, Walter Seipp, management board chairman, said Tuesday. He would not comment on the size of the dividend.

Meanwhile, Dresdner Bank said uesday it recorded a 10-percent decrease in 1981 profit and will cut its dividend to 4 Deutsche marks a share from the 6 DM paid out for

Dresdner Bunk 139,0

At the same time, Deutsche Bank, saying that operating profit increased 29.7 percent in 1981, said Tuesday its dividend for the year would be unchanged at 10 DM per share.

And Berliner Handels und Frankfurter Bank said it will pay an unchanged 1981 dividend of 9 DM a share.

Mr. Seipp said of Com-merzbank's situation: "We are ful-ly aware that our shareholders expect a resumption of dividend pay-ments for 1982. Our reserves have ont been stocked up now for the third time in a row.

"In view of the continuing fall in interest rates, we are confident we can begin to pay a dividend again provided no extraordinary burden arises during the year."

Commerzbank omitted a dividend for 1980 and 1981 and paid 8.50 DM for 1979.
Mr. Scipp said Commerzbank's earnings in 1981, which declined 8 percent from 1980, continued to be affected by earlier mismatching of maturities in credit business. He said this had left the bank at the beginning of 1981 with 26.5 billion DM of such medium- and long-term assets with fixed-rate returns that have had to be financed in the short-term market, where prevail-ing interest rates have been higher. Despite the recent decline in West German interest rates, Com-merzbank's mismatched business bring its spending under control.

Mr. Scripp said: "Foreigners are hardly willing to invest in a country ... whose government is not strong enough to keep in check state finances. The responsibility for West German interest rates lies less with the Bundesbank than

Great Tin Mystery — a $500-milhon whodunit — the elues all lead to Kuala Lumpur, the capital of the world's largest tin producer.

Malaysia has neither confirmed that it was the kingpin in the plot to corner tin, nor denied that its warehouses are full of the key metal. But those who follow the trading of tin have no doubt that Malaysia was involved.

Seen from Malaysia's viewpoint, the bizarre actions of the past eight months make sense. The country obviously benefited from the price rise that helped local producers through the last half of a dismal

And for some time Malaysia has been disillusioned both by the London Metal Exchange and the International Tin Council, which controls the buffer stocks, the reserve of tin used to huy or sell and prevent wild swings in prices.

Producers' Complaints

Producers, led by Malaysia, have complained about what they see as a lack of regard for the Third World. And Malaysia has been cocouraging producers to take charge of their own resources by setting up a second market in Kuala Lumpur and by establishing a producers association.

Had Indonesia and Thailand followed Malaysia's suggestions in February to join in cutting produc-tion, the surplus tin bought by the mystery buyer would likely have turned up in the stockpiles of the new organization. And the mystery buyer might still be in the market.

But without cocouragement, it made no sense for Malaysia to press its proposals, particularly when Indonesia and Thailand were supporting the ratification of the supporting the radication of the sixth International Tin Agreement. That agreement, which must be signed by April 30 and provides for an increase in the buffer stock from 20,000 to 50,000 tons, will not be signed by the United States.

Need for Foreign Exchange

Apparently, Indonesia told Malaysia that it could not afford to cut production because of the foreign exchange it brings.

Both Indonesia and Thailand apparently told Malaysia that they wanted a functioning LME By stepping out of the market before the tin squeeze crippled the mar-ket, the mystery buyer accommodated the producers.

Although Malaysia may have spent large sums of money to force un prices up, it did export 7,000 more tons than it produced last year. And officials suggest that if Malaysia were the mystery buyer, investing in tin is not altogether irrational. The Malaysian dollar has not been especially strong in re-cent months.

During the high-priced tin mar-ket, Malaysia may have been buy-ing its own tin, subsidizing part of the industry that dies out in a poor

No Entry Into New Fields

The company will not enable Chase to enter new fields because it, like the bank, will be subject to the Glass-Steagall Act that limits the types of investment-banking activities in which commercial banks may engage. Most important, the law prohibits commercial banking companies from underwriting corporate securities.

According to Perrin H. Long of Lipper Analytical Distributors, the Chase subsidiary would rank ninth largest in the nanon, trailing Bache and ahead of Paine Webber.

Despite the Glass-Steagall Act, there are a number of investment-banking activities in which commercial banks may engage, such as underwriting U.S. government securities and municipal bonds, and privately placing corporate

Tuesday. The government revised January's decrease downward to 1.2 percent, twice the 0.6 per-cent originally reported. December's figure also was revised downward, to a 0.8-percent decline from the 0.3-percent de-

The four positive indicators were unemployment claims, new orders for consumer goods, the pace of deliveries and the money supply.

In January. Jupan had a trade delicit of $799 million. The ministry said the size of the current-account surplus was reduced to $35 million by a deficit in invisible trade, such as tourism and shipping. In other economic news, the Ministry of International Trade and Industry said Tuesday that industrial productioo rose 0.5 per-cent in February after January's 0.1-percent decline.

The production index (base 1975) rose to a seasonally adjusted 150.4 in February. MITI said the unadjusted February index was up 3.3 percent from a year earlier. Exports for February totaled 11.5 billion, down 3 percent from year earlier. But imports also fell by 2.6 percent to $10.2 billion, the The decline in exports was the first year-on-year fall since January, 1976.

The drop followed a year-on-year January gain of 10.1 percent, officials said. They attributed the decline exclusively to the weakness of the yen against the U.S. dollar. In yen terms, February exports rose 10.7 percent from a year earlicr. The dollar stood at an average 234.80 yen last month, sharply higher than the 205 yen a year earlier, ministry officials said.

The officials said that Japan's current-account surplus for the fiscal year that ends Wednesday is certain to be considerably less that the government forecast of $10 billion made last December.

The surplus in the first 11 months of the fiscal year was $5.02 billion, and there will not be any significant surplus for March, they Japan's overall balance-of-pay ments deficit narrowed to $1.2 billion in February from u deficit of $2.67 billion in January, the ministry said. February's figure com-pared with a surplus of $656 mil-lion a year earlier.

Hungary: Optimism Under Pressure

By Dan Morgan

Washington Post Service
BUDAPEST — In its time, the Hungarian Nutional Bank housed in an imposing gray stone building regally appointed with marble interior paneling and polished brass banisters - has withstood wars, revolution and financial collapse.

So it is not surprising that the bankers who work there express guarded optimism that the bank also will come through the current credit crunch with its reputation for financial skill intact.

Officials insist as diplomatically they can that Hungary's finances should not be lumped to-gether with those of its Soviet-bloc allies Poland and Romania, whose unpaid bills and $38 billion in debts are a major worry for the international financial system.

"The situation is creating u strain on our reserves," acknowledged Gyula Czirjak, the bank's general manager. But he added, We are in a position to continue making normal payments on our largely beyond its control. Nearly one-fifth of the economy now depends on trade with non-Communist countries. This means that the recession in the West hits hard at Hungary at a time when exports to the West are needed to help pay the $583 million in debt coming due this year.

Mounting tensions between the United States and the Soviet Union add more uncertainty.

Western banks and compar nervous even before the imposition of martial law in Poland, are wornow about the impact on East-West trade of U.S.-sponsored economic sanctions.

Hungary's last major Western loan was a £75-million credit approved Jan. 26 to finance chemics imports. Since then, Western bankers have told their Hungarian counterparts to delay any plans to raise larger, unrestricted credits on the Euromarket, a main source of financing for Hungary through the

These deposits are comparable to loans. In normal times the bank pays interest on this money, which the foreign banks "roll over" every three or six months. By leaving the money in the Bank of Hungary, the banks provide Hungary with additional liquidity. But as Western concern about East-bloc debts mounted last year, some bankers stopped rolling over the deposits and withdrew the funds as they matured.

As a result, the bank's reserves of gold and foreign currencies de-clined from $2.4 billion as of Jan. 1, 1981, to $1.9 billion six months later. Since then, officials say, the reserves have hovered around that level. But the absence of new credits means that Hungary has to dip kets this year.

Editorials here lambast the United States for going ahead with tin sales. Although the decision was made in 1980, and the General Services Administration sold only 5,000 tons in fiscal 1980, the GSA is authorized to sell 30,000 tons over three years.

No one is saying whether Malaysia's new prime minister, an outspoken practitioner of bold sohitions to the country's economic problems, initiated the idea. But he came to power in July, about the time that the mystery buyer began huying tin. The price climbed from August outil November, then softened as producers began to meet the demand and the United States added to the supply from its stock-

Although more tin poured into the market, the mystery boyer kept buying. By the middle of Febru-ary, the market began to panic. Ecuador to Seek Refinancing Plan

CARTAGENA, Columbia — Ecuador hopes to begin talks next month on a $900-million refinancing package for the private sector, an Ecuadoran central bank spokes-

He said initial talks have taken place with a number of banks, including Chase Manhattan, Bank of Tokyo, Midland Bank and Lloyds Bank International, Finance Minister Jaime Morillo Battle will discuss the plan in a visit to New York and London next month. He said the funds will be used to

Highlights from the 1981 Annual Reports

The average gold price received declined from U.S. $623 per ounce in 1980 to U.S. $463 per ounce in 1981 while unit costs per ton milled increased by 16.5% over the same period. A lower recovery grade of 4.1 grams per ton (1980 - 4.5) resulted in a decline in gold production from 19 554 kilograms

Operating profit declined by 66% from R152,7 million in 1980 to R51,7 million and the dividends paid decreased from 120 cents per unit of stock in 1980 to 40 cents in 1981, absorbing R16,1 million.

Expenditure or mining assets amounted to R38,9 million (1980 - R57,4 million). Although it is estimated that expenditure of R25 million will be incurred in 1982, to be apent mainly on the SV 3 shaft programme which is vital to the maintenance of production in the medium and long terms, the amount actually expended will of necessity be influenced by the price of

The uranium treatment plant has been commissioned and the production of uranium oxide concentrates has commenced on a limited scale. Results to date indicate that the mine should have oo difficulty in meeting its contractual delivery commitments which commence in the first quarter of 1983. The rate of underground production from the Middle Elsburg Reefs will in the interim be limited in order to enable ore with a higher gold cootent from other areas of the mine to be treated. The SV 3 shaft was sunk to a depth of 848 metres below collar and certain intermediate

The 4E sub-vertical shaft which reached its final depth of 332 metres below collar in the previous financial year was equipped and commissioned during 1981.

The 20 000 kilowatt surface refrigeration plant, to supply chilled water to underground workings, has been completed and is being commissioned.

Ore reserves declined from 11.6 million tons at an average gold grade of 5.6 grams per tou in 1980 to 10.5 million toos at 5.5 grams per ton. These reserves include 1 891 000 tons of Middle Elshurg Reef ore ut a gold value of 2.8 grams per too and a uranium value of 0.705 kilograms per ton (1980 - 1758 000 tons at 1.8 grams per ton of gold and 0.500 kilograms per ton of uranium] and were computed at a gold price of U.S. $425 per ounce

Operating profit of R176,4 million was 16% lower than in 1980, mainly because the average price received for gold declined from U.S. $621 per ounce in 1980 to U.S. $471 per ounce in 1981. Dividends paid decreased from 1 100 cents in 1980 to 750 cents per share in 1981, absorbing R40,6 million. As a result of a slight increase in recovery grade to 5.2 grams per ton (1980 – 5.1) together with an 11% increase in tonnage treated, the mine produced 23 679 kilograms of gold, 14% more than in 1980.

23 679 kilograms of gold, 14% more than in 1980.

Working costs increased by 8,5% but largely as a result of increased tonnages of low-cost surface dump muterial replecing high-cost material previously mined at SD 32 shaft, unit cost per ton milled decreased by 3,9%. Expenditure on mining assets amounted to R103.9 million compared with R78.6 million io 1980 and R10.9 million was repaid in respect of long-term loans. The current estimate of expenditure in 1982 of R100 million will depend to some extent on the gold price. In 1981 some R63 million was spent on the Cooke No. 3 shaft project and a further R45 million is budgeted to be spent in 1982.

Uoderground operations in the SD 32 shaft area ceased and both that shaft and the Millsite uranium plant were placed on a care and maintenance basis. Sufficient surface material exists to operate the Millsite gold plant at full capacity for a few years and the rate of treatment bus been at full capacity for a few years and the rate of treatment bus been significantly increased.

Production from both Cooke No. 1 and No. 2 shafts increased and the Cooke Plant operated at its rated capacity for both gold and uranium with improved extraction efficiencies.

unproved extraction efficiencies.

Cooke No. 2A ventilation shaft was commissioned and udditional hoisting facilities at Cooke No. 1 and No. 2 shafts will match the 20% increase in gold treatment capacity being installed at Cooke Plant.

Shaft sinking and construction work at Cooke No. 3 shaft progressed well and haulages to link this shaft to Cooke No. 2 shaft have reached the shaft position. Development of the reef horizons to be served by Cooke No. 3 shaft has encountered encouraging gold and uranium values.

Uranium oxide production declined from 648,5 tons in 1980 to 591,8 tons mainly as a result of cessation of mining operations at SD 32 shaft. Contractual deliveries were maintained by purchasing concentrates from other producers. Once Cooke No. 3 shaft attains full production the company should be able to produce sufficient uranium oxides to meet all its commitments. As a result of the combination of lower production and higher treatment costs, profit from uranium declined to R12.0 million

Ore reserves at the Cooke Section increased to 8.2 million tons 21 an average grade of 10,3 grams of gold and 0,236 kilograms of granium per ton (1980 - 5,4 million). These reserves were based on a gold price of U.S. 5425 per ounce (R13 000 per kilogram).

BOOKS

MINIS By David Black. $33 pp. $13.95. Wyden Books, 1633 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10019. Reviewed by Richard F. Snow

DEEP moonlit night in the pri-rie town of Galilee, Neb., 1999, A rie town of Galilee, Neb., 1999, and 50-year-old Abraham Gottenlerg is scrambling up from the depot haking a shortcut for the first time in his adult life, running toward his forme. He's ridden straight through from Worcester. Mass., where Samund Freud has just given five lectures at Clark University. Bursting into the sleeping house, he shakes his two sons awake and harries them out into the family buggy. He drives the gruggy young men to where a bend in the Black River curves around an athndoned farm. "I'm going to buy it and start a clinic there for the treatment of mental disorders," he tells his sons, if mental disorders," he tells his sons want you to help me."

So begins David Black's engrossing novel "Minds." As the opening scent suggests, it is a family saga. But do spite the presence of the founding partiarch, his sons, the bold declaration of manages and other such femiliar. of purpose, and other such familiar accessories, this book is no ordinary representative of that durable genre. It's not very long, first of all, and it is not about plantation life or a banking dynasty or a fashion empire; it's about a Midwestern psychiatric clinic, the people who built it, and the people who need it.

Abraham Gottenberg first arrives in Galilee in 1884. He has left New York City to set up shop as a general practitioner — the only sort of doctor any town smaller than Cincinnati could then support — in the promis-ing country west of the Mississippi. He knows he's pretty good, but he "often feared, when his patients re-covered, that he'd flimflammed them into getting better." He suspects his prescriptions are secondary to his ability to ease suffering by listening and caring. He calls this his "minis ter's knack," and he doesn't like it. Galilee, Neb., does, though, and he prospers and becomes known as the "Talking Doctor" — paradoxically, since he listened more than he talked. As he listens, he becomes convinced everyone is odd: this man trims the tobacco around the bowl of his pipe with a straight razor, that woman can't sleep at night because of "the sound of the house settling." The tics and small eccentricities be notices in his patients and their families first amuse him, then horrify him, "Abraham realized that he, too, was odd: he'd become obsessed with oddness." He begins to fill ledgers with his observation of these peculiarities; somehow, he feels, the aggregate will be able to teach him "why people do what they do." In time his wife tells him he's changed: he doesn't laugh

By now he's getting journals from Europe filled with the writings of other people who don't find oddness funny; and by the time he goes east to hear Freud, he's as well equipped as anyone in America to found his clinic.

It galls Abraham that Jacob, his first son, prefers fairy tales to the skewed wonders of the real world. Abraham tells him of "the Vampire of Dedham, a telegraph operator who was found drinking dog's blood," only to have Jacob prefer the Arthurian legends. He can't see that Jacob like Jung - responded not to the ty that flashed through them."
Jacob's younger brother, Hermann, on the other hand, has no use whatever for fairy tales. Jacob grows up to be interested only in ideas, Hermann only in facts.

Jacob's youth is filled with the magical: he survives an ceric noctumal balloon ascension that probably would have killed him and an antic ride on a powerhouse engine's whirl-ing flywheel that surely would have. Hermann — save for a savage interlude in the prize ring — is steadily cantious: "He filled his mind as though he were packing a trunk, making sure every comer was used, no space wasted." "Minds" tells a great many stories during its short course, but the private he but the major one is the struggle be-tween the two brothers. They fight each other for 70 years - for their father's approval, for the love of their first cousin Miriam (herself a dedicated "alienist"), and finally for control of the clinic. The clinic has turned out to be worth fighting for. As early as 1915 is was a going concern, with an elaborate yellow Queen Anne director's house and a thoroughly professional staff of doctors, "satraps of the provinces of Electrotherapy, Hypnotism, Nutrition, Massage, Zinc Phosphate, Oxide of Iron, Belladonna, Cold Baths, Sleep, Sexual Abstinence." By 1947 it has become prominent enough for Founders Day — the sort of solemn memorial that Hermann finds particularly satisfying. — to draw a congranulatory telegram from President Truman. With the dedication of each new marble building, with the completion of every new wing and dormitory, Hermann struggles to get And Jacob, worned that human values may be lost along with human scale, steadily resists. ...

Bright, Burbed Incidents

David Black tells his story in bright barbed incidents, shot through with perfectly observed peripheral detail. We see a train running under a cloud, and as "the engine entered the shad-der, the white plume from its funnel furned yellow and seemed to solidiff; Miriam riding her bicycle through a morning whose "air smelled as fresh as the inside of a cucumber"; Abraham's mortar and pestle "made of stone the color of cheese."

The steady poetic accuracy of Black's observation gives his narrative a coherence it might otherwise lack. And, indeed, as the Gottenbergs' long battle draws closer to the present day, the story occasionally seems a bit hasty and diffuse. But perhaps this is evident only because the opening chapters of the book are so very good. They illuminate, with economy and grace, a particular sort of American, genius. It is truly stirring to watch Abraham bringing to his inchoate project just the sort of intuitive brilliance the Wright brothers were then nce the Wright brothers were then bringing to theirs, developing a tre-mendous new science with the same lack of equipment, the same steady seriousness of purpose.

IF left in peace on the diagramed deal, North-South might settle in three no-trump, but this was clearly undesirable when East opened with a weak two-heart bid. In these circumstances, any game contract is a shaky proposition. The obvious choice is five diamonds, but there was a rather unlikely alternative and North-South found it

South made a takeout double and North chose to drive to game with a cue-bid of three hearts. Rather than bid his four-card diamond suit, South bid three spades, with the idea that he could play four spades if his partner held four cards in that suit. North had the same idea. Thinking that his partner held four spades, he raised to game, and South bad to struggle in a 3-3 fit. He was outnumbered in the trump suit, a circumstance that is usually fatal, but he sur-The defense took two beart tricks, and East shifted to a trump. South took two of his three trump winners and led the club jack to the ace. He then led to the diamond ace and ruffed his remaining heart. The closed hand was re-entered

2d Coach Claims Rival Violated Recruiting Rules

New York Times Service NEW ORLEANS - Fred Winter Monday became the second major college basketball coach in five days to say that he had turned in a rival college to the National Collegiate Athletic Association for illegal recruiting.

Winter, the 60-year-old head basketball coach at California State-Long Beach, said he had lost a player he was trying to recruit because another college violated NCAA rules to attract the athlete. Digger Phelps, bead coach at Notre Dame, said last week that he had turned in two colleges for pay-ing as much as $10,000 a year to each of three athletes, and because of it Notre Dame lost any chance to recruit the players.

Winter, elected Sunday as president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches to succeed Dean Smith of North Carolina, said his report to the NCAA did not involve the payment of money

He refused to name the school or to specify the recruiting rule that was violated. Phelps also refused to name the schools he had reported.

To be honest with you, this past summer I wrote my first letter ever to the NCAA infractions committee on evidence I had that a recruiting rule was being violated," Winter said. "I don't want to dwell on it except to say I reported one

All week Smith had insisted that life would go on whether North the season began and No. 1 during the season, but I'm not sure we were the best team tonight. I think I was outcoached. They were the hunters, we were the hunted."

Georgetown had the ball, trailing by a point, yet did not call time to set up a play.

"If you call time out, you give the other team a chance to set up a defense," Thompson said. "I didn't know what defense Dean

Not when there are moments like the 81st minute in the Paris match to remember, you don't.
Then it was that Bordeaux leftwinger Gerard Soler, who had been a spectator on the beach while others went through their

Yearning for Romance

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK — The stars don't have any sense of social responsibility anymore, at least not the new stars. They just don't seem to care. Their attitude seems to be:
"Now that I'm a star I'll do as I please, and the public be darned. If I were a star, you know what

I'd do? I'd have a romance right away with anothaway with another star. Not that I'm terribly hor to romance stars, but when you're a star I think you have an obligation to the public to have consense. to have romances with other stars. I'm remioded of this by the reappearance of Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton on the gossip-magazioe covers.

"Liz and Dick: Together Again!" It doesn't really make the pulse pound, does it? Still you have to respect Liz and Dick for doing their duty to the public.

Baker

Liz and Dick are not like the new stars. They doo't say, "The public be darned." Liz and Dick are old stars, and like the great old stars they are willing to step once more into the breech to fill the public hunger for rootance, romance among the stars. And what do the new stars do to satisfy our thirst for romance? The answer is in People magazine. One week after its cover was devoted to old stars Liz and Dick together again it printed a cover of new star John Belushi, dead of drug abuse.

From the commercial success of post-mortern literature and music connected with these new stars you might coaclude that the public is fascinated by the youthful deaths of the new stars.

Is a drug overdose romantic just because it happens among the stars? Romantic is Liz and Dick, scarred by excessive marriage and just a mite long in the tooth, rising nevertheless to satisfy the public's wish to believe that somewhere there is a beautiful world where even wrinkles cannot stale the thrill of love.

Because the new stars do oot share Liz and Dick's scose of duty. the public nowadays is compelled to fall back on its own resources by turning their daily lives into adventures in romance. If the stars will not supply vicarious romance, well then you must romanticize yourself — this at least seems to be the line of thought pursued by many nowadays who seem far gone in fantasy.

There was a women being inter-viewed on the radio the other day - not a star, a woman you never heard of - and the reason she was being interviewed was that she had just "actualized" herself. As a re-sult, she said, she had become "fully human."

This woman's talk made oo seose whatever if you listened for rational discourse.

She was talking purest oonsense by all rational measures, but it was a nosense that flowed from a ro-mantic fantasy she had spuo for herself. A weird process, "self-ac-tualizatioo," had turned her into a oew exciting person - that's what he was saying. To the days of the old stars, I suspect, this woman would have been cootent to stay in touch with reality and satisfied ber romantic oceds with oews that a couple of stars had escaped dreariness and found happiness at last with each other. Without the stars to do their duty for her, she had to turn herself into a figure of romance.

A similar phenomecon appears in the recent public absorption with "burn-out." Until the idea of "burn-out" was created people who couldn't do their work satisfactorily had to accept the fact that they had failed. They couldn't cut the mustard. What a bleak and prosaic thought to live with. Now of course it doesn't have to be lived with, Nowadays if you can't cut the mustard any more you don't have to concede failure, you can turn romanic and call yourself a victim of "burn-out."

The phrase shimmers with romantic resonances, implying that you have spent your strength and genius in long brutal struggle and been shattered by the fury of your exertions.

Thus we are invited to escape into romantic fantasy rather than admit we can't cut the mustard and start trying to get demoted back down to our level of competence, "Burn-out" is another foolish device for supplying the ro-mance we yearn for. Let us pray that Liz and Dick may never be afflicted with it.
